

October 21, 2009

Gosh Yarn It

Free Fingers by Nina Wexler Gloves

The word “cancer” makes you want to scream every four-letter word in the book.

Including “love,” thanks to Nina Wexler. The breast cancer survivor knitted like a banshee while undergoing treatment and has turned her hobby into a business called Free Fingers, which is a line of fingerless gloves, handmade by Wexler and her team of gals.

Each pair is unique and made out of merino, silk, cashmere, and alpaca yarn. Unlike most stitch-and-bitch groups, this one consists of students on scholarship, widows, victims of layoffs, and retired workers making hand warmers for a good cause.

As if that’s not commendable enough, Free Fingers donates 100 percent of profits to breast cancer research foundations.

Which brings to mind a six-letter word: thanks.

Available online at blueandcream.com. For more information, go to freefingersbynina.com.

Photo: Courtesy of Free Fingers

Do-Gooder, Handcrafted, Winter

© 2009 DailyCandy, Inc. All rights reserved. DailyCandy is strictly editorial. There is no pay for play.

Editorial Policy Privacy Policy Terms & Conditions Artwork by Miss Capricho